It's Just Like
Saving Dollars.

To put your money in Home Furnishings on our LITTLE-AT-A-TIME plan, and it pays big interest in the shape of increased comfort of life in a well-furnished home of your own.

Some of our customers come to us just because they want credit and know that we sell that way. Others—more discriminating—come because they want the best in furniture quality, the latest in furniture styles, the fairest in furniture prices, and they find here what they come for, too.

Of course, we can never tell just what brings you—maybe one and maybe the other—maybe both, but just to be perfectly sure of pleasing you when you do come we'll go right on keeping a big stock of the quality and styles that will suit you best. Our prices are always marked in plain figures on our goods. It's the same to all—so we couldn't take advantage of you even if we did know—and wanted to.

BISHOP RANDOLPH
AT ST. JOHN'S TODAY

Head of the Episcopal Church in Virginia to Confirm Class and Preach Here.

DR. BUCHANAN COMING TO THE CITY

Richmond Divine to Address the Baptist Young People's Union on the Theme of "Christianity as Applied to Socialistic Questions"—Services in Other Churches.

Right Reverend A. M. Randolph, D. D., LL. D., bishop of the Virginia Episcopal diocese, will confirm a class at Old St. John's Episcopal church this morning at 11 o'clock. This afternoon the bishop will visit the colored mission and tonight he will conduct the services in Emmanuel chapel in Phoebus.

First Methodist.
The usual services will be conducted at the First Methodist church today by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Stiff.

Peppermint.
The preparation of peppermint is especially an American industry. The peppermint is cut when in bloom, like hay, dried, placed in close wooden vats and steamed. The oil cells burst and the oil passes upward with the steam, which is condensed and conducted into a receiver, where the oil rises and is piped off. It takes about 350 pounds of dry peppermint to produce one pound of oil. An acre of land yields from six to ten pounds of oil, often more, even as high as fifty pounds.

To the Cigar Smokers.

THWARTED CRIME.

A Curious Tale, the Scene of Which is Laid in India.

An Indian up country paper tells a curious tale. A rich lady, with her two children, both infants, was going, it is said, in her own "ekka" from Ramnagar to a place in the center of the Bar tract. The driver was a trustworthy servant of the family, and it was for this reason that the lady had not directed herself of the ornaments she usually wore. But the sight of the jewels was too much for him, and at an exceptionally lonely spot in that lonely country he suddenly asked his mistress to hand him her valuables. On her suspecting his real designs and hesitating, the miscreant showed himself in his real colors and made her and her little ones, who could barely toddle about, get down. The horrible thought that was working in his brain, that of hiding his crime by means of murder, had given his face a sardonic look, which made the poor woman tremble.

Then the fiend bound her hand and foot and informed her that he would first kill her children and then do her to death. By her earnest entreaties she prevailed over him to begin with her first. He had an ax in his hand, with which he aimed a blow at her; but, the head being loose, it flew away and fell a few paces off, the handle only remaining in his grasp. He stepped into the grass to look for it and disappeared behind a mound. She waited, her certain doom with all her nerves on the strain. She gradually fell into a swoon, and when she came round the first thing she saw was her husband bending over her and her babies crying and tugging at her clothes.

After she had gone, a nameless uneasiness seized her husband. He could not reason away his vague fears, try as he would, and at last he mounted his horse and followed the "ekka." He had proceeded but a few miles when the sight of his wife and children lying bound up with cords upon the ground met his eyes. And the story that his wife told him congealed his blood with horror. They, both then, drawn by an irresistible curiosity, went toward the direction that the miscreant had taken to pick up his ax, and think of their surprise when they saw his corpse already lying, blue, putrid and bloated, the flies buzzing over it in clouds. Retribution had come in the shape of a "karunda" or the deadly variety known as "khaki," rare even in those snake infested parts, whose bite instantaneously paralyzes the victim and decomposes the body in an hour.—London Globe.

Penn's Treaties.

William Penn's famous treaty with the Indians was made under an elm tree near Philadelphia almost immediately upon his arrival in America, about November, 1682. It had no reference to the ground on which the city of Philadelphia was built, for Penn bought that from the Swedes, who had previously bought it from the Indians. Penn's treaty was mainly a compact of peace and friendship, in which it was guaranteed that under his proprietorship they should not be robbed of their lands. The treaty was sacredly kept by both parties, so much so that Voltaire afterward spoke of it as the only treaty never sworn to and never broken. Penn afterward made treaties with nineteen other Indian tribes, all of which were observed with perfect good faith. The territory out of which the state of Pennsylvania has been formed was granted to Penn by King Charles II. of England in satisfaction of a claim for $10,000 which Penn's father, Admiral Penn, held against the government.

Are You Left Eyed?

"Left eyed people simply own the town these days," said a Broadway oculist. "If the prominence and importance of that optic continue to increase we shall one day be a left eyed race. In more than half the patients I treat the left eye is already considerably larger than the right. It is brighter and it lasts longer. If you want to find out which eye is stronger try to read first with one, then with the other, unassisted by its mate. Nine times out of ten that test shows how much more useful the left eye is than the right."

"I devoutly hope that I shall never lose either of my eyes, but if one has to go I just as devoutly hope that it will be the right. There was a time when the superstitious and even specialists on eyes believed that only left handed people were also left eyed. That theory is now exploded. Overdevelopment of the left eye is in danger of becoming a disease, the peculiar effects of which are already apparent in many faces."—New York Press.

Getting a Degree in China.

Education and learning are objects of great reverence in China. The attainment of a degree is a tremendous honor. The Rev. E. J. Hardy says in his "John Chinaman at Home": "When a man obtains the degree of Sau Tsoi (B. A.) large placards are sent to his friends announcing his success. These placards are frequently posted outside the house of the recipient to show his pride at being able to claim friendship with so distinguished a person. Great is the ovation that is awarded to a successful candidate on returning home. Feasts are given, bands of music and processions parade the streets. The hero of the hour, wearing square toed boots, a gilt flowerlike ornament in his cap, and across his chest and back the bands of light red silk that indicate his new dignity, is told by every one that he is an honor to his parents, to the school in which he studied and to the city or village of his birth. His parents are publicly thanked by the civic authorities for having given birth to so talented a son."
